What do you need to do?
Are you a (highly) skilled migrant? You initially came on a 457 visa? Then tell me what brought you to Australia! Why did you come? How was your experience of moving here?

If you agree to talk to me, I will ask you these questions in a short telephone interview. Of course all information you provide is confidential and you will remain anonymous as respondent.

20 to 30 minutes of your precious time is all I need!

How to get in touch
Just leave your contact details on my website (click here) or email me (click here) and I will get back to you!

What's in for you?
Make your voice and experience heard. The results of this research project will be distributed to policymakers and other stakeholders.

Why participate?
20 minutes of your precious time will breathe life into a 4-year research project which is designed to inform better migration policy.

Participate in a research project on highly skilled migration to Australia
Countries like Australia attract large numbers of skilled migrants to tackle skill shortages and ease demographic pressures. Even though immigration policies are thought to have some effect on the attraction of highly skilled migrants, their exact role is not fully understood.

- This is precisely why I need to talk to YOU!
- You are a highly skilled migrant (i.e. university degree and/or managerial position)?
- You came on a 457 visa and (ideally) applied from abroad?
- You came to Australia to work (and did not follow a family member or come here to study in the first place)?

Then please contact me and allow me to talk to you!

The researcher
Natalie Herold
PhD Candidate & Sessional Lecturer
Southern Cross University, Gold Coast
+61 (0) 402 074 000
www.migrationresearchaustralia.weebly.com
natalie.herold@scu.edu.au

Can we talk?